WELL DR. BRANHAM,

"THAT WILL BE ABOUT ALL FOR YOU."

It is said of David's harp that it had a thousand strings,
and the king played on them all.

Maybe this explains why the psalm singer's reputation
as a good musician has defied the assaults of time.

Master of an instrument with strings a plenty, he always had a chance for variety.

He didn't have to play on the same string all the time,
nor even part of the time.

As variety is the spice of life, no wonder David's contribution to the pleasure of the soul is remembered with relish a quarter of a century of centuries after his prodigi-ally strung harp is silent.

Now my harp can not compare in numerical string strength with David's, but I have enough to enable me to offer a fairly good variety of tunes when I am put on my metal.

I am working one string non-union hours just now, because I have a case on that needs this treatment.

I, therefore, once more introduce Dr. A. I. Branham, agent of the American Book Co., which concern is noted in the Congressional Record as eighth on the list of trusts
of America.

I do this for the purpose of asking—

Why Dr. Branham?

He is a Bryan in eloquence, a Chesterfield in politeness,
a Bacon in knowing things about books and a Talleyrand
in finding out what his rivals are doing—

But, why Dr. Branham?

He is as busy as a bee, as energetic as a beaver, as sleepless as a weasel, as tireless as a greyhound and as persistent as a fly fond of bald heads—

But, why Dr. Branham?

As a martin flies to his gourd—so does the genial,
affable, plausible doctor direct his course to the place where pedagogues are gathered together, and arriving there this same doctor butts in when books are discussed.

All this is very well—

But, why Dr. Branham?

His gentlemanly bearing, his courteous manner, his high qualities of heart and mind make him an acquaintance to be cultivated, a friend to be cherished—

And, as a man taken into any circle, he would add to its charm—

But as agent of the American Book Co. (No. 8 on Trust List, see Cong. Record) he violates all the rules of propriety and good taste—and "not to put too fine a point on it"—good conduct—

When he appears in Tallahassee while the Legislature is in session, to prevent—by making an open fight against it—but still to prevent—the passage of a bill for State Text Book Uniformity.

What has the agent of the American Book Co. (Trust
No. 8—Ask Uncle Sam) to do with Text Book Uniformity?
Nothing at all, my son, absolutely nothing.

This is no question of book concerns. In none of the State Uniformity bills now pending is the American Book
Co. (8 is its number) mentioned directly or by implication.

The State of Florida is not interested in the business concerns of Dr. Branham, nor his friends nor enemies.

The doctor told the County Superintendents yesterday
that his company has been slandered by its business rivals.

So does John D. about "Slandered" Oil.

Quite shocking, it is true—if it's true—but,
Who cares?

Maybe you and maybe I, and maybe Dr. Branham—

But, not the State of Florida, considered in its Legislative branch.

Florida has provided courts in which a man or even a trust (Refer to Cong. Rec.) can get action.

Dr. Branham told the County Superintendents that his company was dead sure to summon its traducers to the bar of outraged justice.

All right! Go ahead!

That's why justice keeps a bar.

But, Dr. Branham should keep away from legislators who are going to vote on a question with which his company has nothing to do.

Dr. Branham also told the County Superintendents that his company wanted to save Florida from the flimsy books, which it furnished Georgia.

Good Dr. Branham!

When Florida needs you she will call you—

In the meantime—

Fade away!
